Novel adeno-associated virus serotype 1 polynucleotide useful for preparation of medicament for delivery of a transgene to a host.

Claim 7; Page 87-90; 108pp; English.

The patent discloses an adeno-associated virus serotype 1 (AAV-1) DNA which is characterised by two inverted terminal repeats (ITR) and open reading frames for rep and capsid (cap) proteins. The rep reading frame encodes four proteins, Rep 78, Rep 68, Rep 52 and Rep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, VP1, VP2 and VP3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV hence is useful for transforming host cells, and in the preparation of a

These sequences were used in the scope of the invention for comparison with the cap protein derived from AAV serotype 9. The AAV capsid comprises three proteins vpl, vp2 and vp3, which are alternative splice variants. The AAV or the nucleic acid molecule is useful for preparing a medicament for delivering a transgene

                                                                                  The present sequence is the protein sequence of the vpl capsid protein of adeno associated virus serotype 1 (AAVI). The invention provides the nucleic acid and amino acid sequences of novel AAV8 and fragments of these sequences. Each of these fragments may be used in a variety of vector systems and host cells. Among the desirable fragments are the cap proteins, including vpl, vp2, vp3 and hypervariable regions, the rep proteins, including vpl, vp2, vp3 and hypervariable regions, the rep proteins, including rep78, rep68, rep52 and rep40, and the sequences encoding these proteins. The fragments may be used alone, in combination with other AAV8 sequences or in combination with elements from other AAV0 or non-AAV viral sequences in the production of recombinant AAV and for use as antisense delivery vectors, gene therapy vectors or vaccine vectors. A claimed molecule comptises a cap protein of a functional AAV rep gene from a serotype selected from AAV1, AAV2, AAV3, AAV4, AAV5 and

The AAV sequence have the following activities: cytostatic, antipsoriatic, antipheumatic, antiarthritic, neuroprotective, antidiabetic, antithyroid, dermatological, and antiinflammatory. The AAV sequence can be used in gene therapy or as part of a vaccine to treat disorders. The method is useful in detecting and/or identifying AAV sequences and isolating novel sequences that are identified. The sequences may be used e.g. for preventing or treating hyperproliferative conditions such as cancers and psoriasis, and other autoimmune diseases like rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, autoimmune thyroiditis, scleroderma or Crohn's disease. This sequence represents an AAV related protein sequence of the invention.

CC above; a recombinant AAV virion comprising the mutated protein above; and CC delivering a recombinant AAV virion to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate CC subject. The recombinant AAV virion is useful for delivering a CC heterologous nucleic acid molecule to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate CC subject, where the protein encoded by the heterologous nucleic acid molecule is expressed at a level that provides a therapeutic effect, CC where the recombinant AAV virion may comprise a non-primate, mammalian CC immunoreactivity to the virion as compared to immunoreactivity of primate of control encodes a therapeutic primate decreased in control elements capable of directing the in vivo transcription cC in useful for treating or preventing a wide variety of disorders such as thempohila, glycogen storage deficiency type 1A, pepck deficiency, CC galactosemia, phenyletonuria, Crigler-Najjar disease, Gout and Lesch-CC Nyan syndrome, Zellweger syndrome, ischemic diseases, atherosclerosis, CC cancer, inflammatory and immune disorders, muscular dystrophies, and CC diabetes. This is the amino acid sequence of adeno-associated virus 1 crigler-Naj and control expection vivo.

The methods and compositions of the present invention are useful for the prevention and/or treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, sarcoidosis, diabetes, scleroderma, psoriasis, vasculitis, Crohn's disease, hemophilia, HIV, bacterial infection, cancer and ulcerative colitis. The present sequence represents the amino acid sequence of an adeno-associated virus protein.

The method comprises delivering to the subject a recombinant adeno-associated virus (AAV) comprising a gene encoding a human apolipoprotein E (apoB) or apoA under the control of a regulatory control sequence which directs expression of the gene. The recombinant AAV also comprises a capsid protein selected from an AAV serotype (e.g. AAV7) or AAV8) which preferentially expresses high levels of transgene in live. A therapeutically effective amount of apoE or apoA expression is obtained upon delivery of low dose of AAV. The method of the invention is useful for lowering total cholesterol levels in a subject, e.g. for treating atherosclerosis, and for correcting defects in lipoprotein. The present sequence represents a cappid protein of AAV serotype 1 (AAV1), which may be used in recombinant AAV vectors of the invention.

The present sequence is capsid protein VP1 of one such serotype (AAV6). AAV6 can be used to contruct AAV viral vectors for use in gene therapy for a range of disorders: cystic fibrosis, cancer, AIDS, atherosclerosis, sickle cell anaemia, thalassaemia, blood clotting disorders and diabetes. The AAV viral vectors have increased transduction efficiency of a particular host cell as the AAV virion containing the AAV vector genome can be modified to express a capsid protein of an AAV serotype that transduces the selected host cell

The AAV sequence can be used in gene therapy or as part of a vaccine to treat disorders. The method is useful in detecting and/or identifying AAV sequences and isolating novel sequences that are identified. The sequences may be used e.g. for preventing or treating hyperproliferative conditions such as cancers and psoriasis, and other autoimmune diseases like rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, autoimmune thyroiditis, scleroderma or Crohn's disease. This sequence represents an AAV related protein sequence of the invention.

The invention describes a mutated adeno-associated virus (AAV) capsid protein that when present in an AAV virion imparts decreased immunoreactivity to the virion as compared to the corresponding wild-type virion. Also described are: a polymucleotide encoding the mutated protein above; a recombinant AAV virion comprising the mutated protein above; and delivering a recombinant AAV virion to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate subject. The recombinant AAV virion is useful for delivering a heterologous nucleic acid molecule to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate subject, where the protein encoded by the heterologous nucleic acid molecule is expressed at a level that provides a therapeutic effect, where the recombinant AAV virion may comprise a non-primate, mammalian AAV capsid protein that when present in an AAV virion imparts decreased

The protein or the recombinant AAV virion is useful for treating or preventing a wide variety of disorders such as hemophilia, glycogen storage deficiency type 1A, Pepck deficiency, byan syndrome, Zellweger syndrome, ischemic diseases, Gout and Leschthrombosis, embolisms, Parkinson's disease, congestive heart failure, cancer, inflammatory and immune disorders, muscular dystrophies, and diabetes.
